A DEMOCRATIC OPINION.

Here is a manlike opinion of Senator Conkling from a Democratic paper, The Freeman's Journal: "Roscoe Conkling, like his brother-in-law, Horatio Seymour, is stronger than his party. When Horatio Seymour was on the ticket for any office, there were many thousands of the opposite party that in his case went for the man. Many other thousands, not so free from party obedience, would not vote for his opponent. Roscoe Conkling has a great deal of the same kind of personal popularity. If Roscoe Conkling had, at Cincinnati, been nominated for President—Mr. Tilden being his competitor—Mr. Conkling would have carried the State of New York, and so would have been elected President. Roscoe Conkling rises, on this fog, as a man among men. He is utterly opposed to us in politics, is an utter stranger in person. But he shows himself a man among men—a manly man—a man asserting his rights, and ready to challenge whoever dares oppose him. We are, and expect to be, in hostility with Senator Conkling, politically. But we are glad to recognize him as a bold statesman, and not a tricky politician. It is always easy to get along with gentlemen who own their own souls are their own. We disagree with Senator Conkling on many points, but he has refreshed our eyes, after a long looking on, with the figure of a man disposed to make other people follow him."

NEW ROUTE TO SOUTHERN OREGON.

The Silver State of Thursday has the following interesting report of the course and surroundings of a new wagon road to Southern Oregon: "Hon. W. H. Howard, member of the Nevada Legislature, now engaged in freighting from Winnemucca, has just returned from a trip to camp Harney, Oregon. He gives us a description of the route to that place which we publish as an item of interest to freighters and the public generally. The distance from the railroad at this point to Camp Harney over the road traveled at present is 220 miles. This might be shortened from 20 to 40 miles by a small outlay of labor. There is plenty of grass and water on the route, and the only difficulty experienced by heavily loaded teams is in crossing Stein Mountain, from Juniper lake to Doc Anderson's, a distance of 15 miles. The scenery along the road is grand and imposing. The road skirts Harney lake, a beautiful sheet of water some 16 miles long and about half as wide. This lake is literally covered with duck, geese and pelicans, and a great many Indians resort there at this season of the year to hunt and fish. Grass grows luxuriantly in the vicinity of the lake and all through Harney valley, and a few stock men are the only white inhabitants of the place. At present there is one cavalry company and a part of an infantry company at Harney, under command of Major Dunn. C. Ryan's stage, carrying the United States mail and express matter, runs from McDermit to Harney, thence to Canyon City, Oregon, weekly. Heretofore nearly all the freight for Harney has been shipped from the Dalles at the cost of four cents per pound. Now, merchants and the Government are having supplies shipped from San Francisco by way of Winnemucca, and thereby effect a saving of at least $20 per ton. Mr. Howard says that a few weeks' work on the road would not only shorten the distance traveled at present, but make it a first class road for heavy teams during the freighting season."

A MEDICINE-WOMAN PUT TO DEATH

The Bodie Standard of Oct. 10 relates the following:—On Thursday night last a medicine woman of the Piate tribe, who has been living near Bridgeport, was shot to death by three buck Indians. On Friday morning the chief of the tribe called upon Judge Whitman and related to him the circumstances of the killing. The medicine woman had failed to cure a sick child of the Chief, and this being the third patient who had died on her hands, she was condemned to death. Two young men assisted the father of the dead child in carrying out the edict of the law. She was removed a short distance from the camp, and shot, the three shooting her with one or more balls from six shooters. The object of the Chief's visit to Judge Whitman was to procure a coffin in which to bury his dead child, he not liking the rude mode of burial more generally adopted by the savages. The Judge kindly furnished a coffin that had been around the court house for sometime awaiting a tenant. The child was buried with great ceremony, all the members of the tribe attending the funeral. The old medicine woman was buried without a coffin, a hole being dug two or three feet deep, and she tumbled in in her every day attire.

Old Bob Toombs ought to be dead, but being alive he has said one thing which is too good to be lost. Says he: "Key's not a representative Southern Democrat. As John Randolph used to say, 'He's only a twenty-shilling lawyer.'"

THE BODIE STANDARD.—We have received a copy of the first number of the Bodie Standard. It looks well and seems healthy. Success to it.

A BAD, BAD METHODIST MINISTER.

The Sun relates the following story of faithlessness, deceit and crime on the part of a Methodist minister: The Rev. Alfred Thompson of the Free Methodist Church of Elgin, Ill., was placed in one of the cells of the Gregory street, Jersey City, police station last night. In June he was given leave of absence by his congregation to take a trip to Europe. He told his wife and family that he could not stand the expense of taking them with him, so they staid behind. On the return trip in August last he made the acquaintance of Mrs. Cobham, a pretty brunette. She told him she had deserted her husband, and was going back to New York to remain for a while. The young clergyman volunteered to be her companion, and on arriving in New York they registered at the West Side Hotel in West street as husband and wife. There they remained until Sunday, and then he informed his companion that he intended to start for Chicago, where his family were awaiting his arrival. Mrs. Cobham would have made no objection to his going, but on searching her trunk in the evening she missed her gold watch, chain, two sets of jewelry, several gold trinkets, and eleven English sovereigns. She suspected Thompson at once, and made every effort to have him captured. She was instructed to watch the depots of the Pennsylvania and Erie Railways at Jersey City, and yesterday afternoon with detective Francis, she kept up a vigil at the Pennsylvania Railroad depot, and scanned the passengers for the western bound train as they walked to the cars. Meanwhile Officer Bowe saw a stranger answering the description of young Thompson walk into Lamb's Exchange office in Exchange place, and offer in exchange a second-class ticket for Chicago for a first-class ticket. He surmised that the stranger was Thompson, and, addressing him by name, escorted him to the depot, where he was identified, and thence to the police station. Thompson did not deny taking Mrs. Cobham's valuables, but says that they were freely tendered for acts of friendship. He is a young man of pleasing address, rather good looking, and was dressed neatly in dark clothing. He will be taken to the Toombs to-day if he will go without a requisition. Mrs. Cobham will appear against him.

THE KILLING OF R. C. ALLEN.

Topier, the Canadian who killed Allen lately near Austin tells the following story. We copy from the Reville of Wednesday: Last Monday I left my place in Smith Creek valley to go to Smith Creek, about sixteen miles distant. On the way back, when about a mile from my camp, I met Allen in the road. I stopped my horse about twenty feet distant from him and told him not to come any nearer, as I had heard he wanted to kill me. He said I had been misinformed, and he only wanted to borrow my saddle. I told him to come to my camp that night and I would let him have the saddle; as I thought it was better to loan it to him than to have any trouble with him. He came that night and got the saddle and the next day went to Smith Creek. He returned the same day, and, having occasion to come to town on business, I asked him for my saddle. He replied: "You have got no saddle," and then commenced abusing me, calling me every vile name he could think of. I felt certain he was going to jump me, so I commenced backing away from him to where my gun was, which was about twenty feet distant. He picked up a rock and rushed on me, and when I got within about four feet of the gun, I had to go around a little tree, and I stumbled and he was nearly on me. I got to the gun, however, and as he came at me with the rock in his hand, I raised the gun and fired. He did not fall at the first fire and I fired another shot, as I knew that as I had started in I had to kill him. Allen has been persecuting me and abusing me terribly for a year and a half. He came to my cabin four times, armed to shoot me, and three times with a rope to hang me, hoping to find me alone. I am 37 years old; Allen was about 37. Allen has been a terror to the entire population of that section—men women and children—ever since he has been there. I am a Canadian Frenchman, and have resided in Smith Creek valley since 1863.

DIED ON THE BENCH.—Of the sudden death of a Judge, in his place on the bench, the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution of a late date says: At about 6 o'clock on Thursday evening, while the Superior court was in session in Knoxville, Crawford county, Judge Bernard Hill, the presiding Judge, died on the bench. A criminal trial had just been concluded, and the jury had rendered a verdict of guilty. They neglected to give the value of the goods stolen, and Judge Hill told them that they had best retire and supply this part of the verdict. They went out; and soon afterward an attorney looked up and saw Judge Hill's head thrown back on his chair, a deathly palor overspreading his countenance. Friends rushed to him. With an easy gasp, his spirits passed away, and he sat dead on the bench.
